"A wise man sees as much as he ought, not as much as he can." Let us, therefore, take a quick trip through the news.

Senator LaFollette's charge that the President's withdrawal as a candidate was a clever piece of maneuvering to have the nomination forced on him by the office-holders doesn't square any better with Mr. Coolidge's character than it does with the certainty that as shrewd a politician as the pupil of Murray Crane must have known that if everybody came to believe that he wouldn't have a look-in on election day.

The stock market goes into a nose spin and crashes. It's the wise speculator nowadays who carries a parachute.

We fear that our ravenous handits are going to eat the Old Dutch Market out of house and home.

In the first show of spirit since the relentless Pizarro crushed it out of them in 1532, 80,000 Incas rise in a rebellion that recalls one of the most pitiful stories in the tragic annals of mankind. The Bolivian government will have to submit the question of slingshots to the conference on the limitation of armaments.

Well, the President now has two rivals—Louden's hat is in the Minnesota ring, and a Seattle man is elected leading Eagle.

Speaking of Eagles, Canadian Indians adopt Premier Baldwin and go the Sioux one better by giving him a chair with his new name.

It is gratifying that President Coolidge doesn't appear to be inclined to hurry into taking the Philippines away from the non-political army, which has administered it ever since it drove out the Spaniards, to turn it over to some political branch of the government. "Let well enough alone" is a mighty safe policy.

We fear this sensible recommendation of 2.75% beer as the only solution of the prohibition problem will fall upon deaf ears in Anti-saloon League circles.

"Their word's sufficient; and to ask a reason, In such a state as theirs, is downright treason."

Fifty years ago a young man named Thomas A. Edison came to Washington and The Post reported that he had shown to the Smithsonian scientists an invention for recording the human voice on a little cylinder. The old-fashioned girl who used to know how to play the piano now has a daughter who is an accomplished musician in winding up a phonograph. Let us put on the latest jazz record in honor of this notable anniversary.

Tom Edison! Thy voice shall be immortal through eternity! Hadst thou lived in another time We might hear Caesar for a dime.

In stressing the record of the Government in economy since the close of the war the new G. O. P. campaign book forgets to mention anything about the billions saved by the Democrats before the Republicans came in, and it looks as though they'd have to get out a revised edition. Too bad, boys, but these little editorial errors will happen.

Judging by the Navy estimates Director General Lord carries out to Rapid City by freight, Chairman Butler may have to re-write that little booklet yet.

And still another of the Hawaiian fliers loses his life before the momentous take-off. "Death loves a shining mark."

"Stone walls do not a prison make," said Lovelace, noted sage; This other line of his take— "Nor iron bars a cage."

Going to the hogswog is a boot-legger's vacation down in Maryland, hammocks out under the trees, friendly games of cards, fishing trips 'n everything, and we had all ways thought Lovelace was wrong.

The Geneva conference on a united church progresses to the point where the Anglican Bishop of Bombay opines that John Calvin made a mistake.

It is beginning to be more clearly apparent why Britain declined to disarm herself at Geneva—what a silly thing it would have been at a moment when the "Truce of the Bear" is in a fair way to be broken.

Director General Lord's plan for financing the proposed Gravelly Point airport rather gruels the poor old District taxpayer.

BRITAIN AND RUSSIA PREPARING ARMIES FOR CLASH IN EAST

England Reorganizing Its Force; Will Put Main Base in India.

WAR MOVE IN SPRING IS FREELY PREDICTED

London Plan for Huge White Army in the Orient Is Not Favored by Viceroy.

By HAROLD B. SCARBOROUGH.

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

London, Aug. 12.—Eleven weeks ago on Friday, May 27—diplomatic relations ceased between Great Britain and Soviet Russia. This short space of time has sufficed to set both nations to engaging in active military plans in which they figure as potential enemies.

Whether or not these plans ever come to fruition is for the future to decide, but they envisage a clash between British and Russian power along the northwestern Indian frontier and throughout the Near East generally.

With this in mind, an overhauling of the whole British military machinery is now under consideration, while the Russians likewise are active. The Russians are massing troops in Turkestan, while the British have in mind nothing less than a scheme of army reorganization under which the main striking force of the British army would be concentrated in India. For some time there has been a discussion between the British and Indian governments, the Indian government not being enthusiastic over this step, which would place the greater part of the army in India under the direct control of the war office instead of the viceroy.

Unable to acquiesce.

Lord Irwin this week found himself unable to acquiesce in the view of his home government. Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, the secretary of state for war, is now en route to India and it is forecast that he will take up on the spot the question of changing the status of the British army there. For many months past the British cabinet has been worrying about the Indian defense question, but with the severance of diplomatic relations the question became a live one.

Quarrel references in the British papers have hinted at complications on the matter of imperial defense, but during the last month knowledge which must certainly have reached the British government, apparently has precipitated a showdown. It is common knowledge that the Soviet government believes that the rupture of relations was followed by British efforts to create an anti-Russian bloc—and a study of the continental press will show that the Soviet leaders were not the only ones who failed to be convinced by British disclaimers of this.

The Russians, at any rate, began to take definite steps which appear to have accelerated the British plans. Some months ago the Russians reconditioned the railway from Tashkent to Bokhara and thence to the Afghan frontier.

An attempt is now creditably reported further to improve this line.

FIRE ON DESTROYER IS FOUGHT 2 HOURS

Danger of Magazine Explosion Leads to Flooding of Compartment.

Philadelphia, Aug. 12 (A.P.).—Fire aboard the United States destroyer Lamson at the Philadelphia Navy Yard today gave the 200 members of the crew and marines at the yard a hard two-hour battle before it was extinguished.

The blaze was confined to No. 1 fire-room close to storage oil tanks and the magazine containing powder and shells for target practice. To prevent an explosion the magazine was flooded. The cause of the blaze was undetermined, according to the commandant's office, and the damage amounted to "virtually nothing."

Commander Rufus King and two petty officers were nearly overcome by smoke in saving the ship's papers. During the height of the blaze there was danger of an explosion in the powder magazine. The steel decks of the destroyer grew so hot that it was almost impossible to stand on them.

Crickets in Colorado Wiping Out Crops

Denver, Aug. 12 (A.P.).—The chirp of the cricket, so often associated with the heatstroke, is signaling disaster for homesteaders in Moffat, Routt and Rio Blanco counties, Colo., where millions of the insects are devouring the crops.

Thomas Hies, commissioner of Moffat County, has appealed to Federal authorities for aid in fighting the insects. He declared many homesteaders have abandoned their claims after their crops were eaten by crickets and that half a million acres of Government land were infested.

STOCK PRICES COLLAPSE AS BIG FIRM SUSPENDS

Many Issues Crash 5 to 23 Points When Fuller & Co. Meets Difficulties.

CAUGHT IN SUPPLY NET

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Aug. 12.—The New York stock market broke from five to 23 points today, wiping out millions of paper profits accumulated by bull traders over a long period of rising markets, but came back somewhat subsequently so that the day's maximum net loss was 15 points, in Commercial Steel shares.

Thoroughly frightened by the suspension of the stock exchange house of A. L. Fuller & Co., in connection with the collapse of the stock of the Manhattan Electrical Supply Co., speculators tossed their shares into the market at anything they would bargain. Everywhere was the fear the market was honeycombed with stocks that have been manipulated by bull pools, and in which there existed a situation similar to that in Manhattan Electrical Supply yesterday.

The market, despite the partial recovery in the afternoon, was confused at the close, with many stocks at their lowest for the day and small rallies in others.

The volume of trading exceeded 2,910,000 shares, approximately the previous high record for the year. The ticker at the close was about 22 minutes behind the market.

Eureka Vacuum was a sensational performer, dodging up and down over a wide spread between 50 and 74 1/2. Houston Oil fluctuated between 117 and 133 1/2. Pittsburgh Coal between 50 and 59 1/2. Timken Roller Bearing between 122 and 129. White Sewing Machine between 34 and 48 1/2. Union Carbide between 140 1/2 and 130 1/2. Mathieson Alkali between 109 and 116. and Colorado Fuel between 74 1/2 and 80 1/2.

A severe loss was registered in Air Reduction, which broke from 184 to 163, but recovered more than 11 points, closing but 11 points net lower, and A. M. Byers, which dropped from 81 3/4 to 66 1/2, before recovering nearly 7 points, to finish 71 1/2 off on the day.

Banks which refused to lend money on Manhattan Electrical Supply, thus precipitating the crash yesterday, continued to call loans today.

Fire Company Urged For Mount Vernon

Portland, Ore., Aug. 12 (A.P.).—Philadelphia was chosen today for the 1928 convention of the International Association of Fire Chiefs, and Ross B. Davis, fire chief of that city, was elected president.

The convention adopted a resolution recommending establishment of a fire company at Mount Vernon, Va., site of historical Washington mansion.

Lord Recommends $125,000 For Municipal Airport

Director of Budget at Rapid City Speaks for Gravelly Point Site—Congress Would Share Cost Only From Lump Sum Appropriation.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

Rapid City, S. Dak., Aug. 12.—An appropriation of approximately $125,000 for an airport at Gravelly Point has been recommended by Director of the Budget Lord, he made known here tonight.

The appropriation is to be carried in the regular District appropriation bill, which means that it will be handled strictly as a municipal project with Congress having no more share in the burden than its regular lump sum contribution to the entire District budget.

Some two weeks ago the District Commissioners notified F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War for Aeronautics, that they had approved legislation containing an appropriation for $150,000 to begin the development of Gravelly Point as a site for a permanent airport. The recommendation, it was stated, would be submitted to the Budget Bureau for approval. Having by the approval of this legislation, fulfilled the conditions Davison had laid down for the use of Bolling field as a temporary landing field for the planes of the new air mail line to be started this fall, they requested at the same time a revocable permit for the use of Bolling field by the air mail planes.

$1,000,000 RUM SHIP SEIZED AT NEW YORK DURING BOLD FORAY

Lone Coast Guardsman Captures 46 About to Land Cargo.

SECOND BIG STEAMER TAKEN IN 24 HOURS

Pilot of Ansonia Sinks Barges and Grounds on Bar in Effort to Escape.

New York, Aug. 12 (A.P.).—A rum-running invasion of New York city by ocean-going steamers found the law victor at the end of a 24-hour skirmish today. Two prizes, the steamers Ansonia and Sebastopol, loaded with 12,000 cases of liquor, were anchored under guard of the Statue of Liberty, and 72 men were under arrest. Coast Guard officials estimated the value of the liquor at $1,000,000.

The Ansonia, latest prize of the Coast Guard, a 2,624-ton American freighter, 281 feet in length, was captured by a lone coast guardsman today after the vigilance of a patrolman interrupted a defiant attempt to land her cargo of 7,000 cases at Mariner's Harbor, Staten Island. The Sebastopol, a British trawler of about two-thirds the size, had been captured 24 hours earlier with her cargo and crew of 17.

The patrolman, F. Dauria, after noting unaccountable activity at the Downing shipyard wharf, called for reinforcements. Two score reserves surrounded the wharf from land, hemming in 46 men with seven trucks and three automobiles, and frustrated a desperate attempt of the freighter to escape to sea with her cargo and 26 men, by a timely warning to the Coast Guard.

Single-Handed Capture.

As the police surrounded the wharf, the Ansonia cut her hawsers and dashed under full steam into the narrow Kill Von Kull. Striking two sand barges and shearing one in two, her mad flight ended abruptly as she struck a sand bar. Boatwain George A. Lomas, in charge of a Coast Guard launch, was on the vessel's heels. He seized a rope and scrambled aboard the freighter before her crew could make the launch fast alongside. He cowed the freighter's crew with his pistol, keeping them covered until a police launch brought reinforcements. The steamer was hauled from the bar without difficulty.

The Ansonia was built in Cleveland eight years ago and was used on the Great Lakes for a time, sailing under the name of the Lake Forney. The Bureau of Navigation lists her present owner as the Ansonia Steamship Corporation, Wilmington, Del. She was last reported as calling at the ports of

Girl Convicted by Jury, Is Liberated by Judge

New York, Aug. 12 (A.P.).—Ellen Blandt, 17-year-old girl convicted of highway robbery, got a surprise in the form of a railway fare home to Cleveland instead of a sentence when she appeared in court today to learn her punishment.

County Judge Taylor told her he was convinced she had no part in the robbery and therefore would set aside the jury's verdict. He and former United States Senator Calder, who had been in conversation with the judge, gave her $35 for a ticket.

The girl was convicted last April with three men charged with holding up Anthony Zelinsky. One of the men got life imprisonment and the other two long prison terms.

NAVY BUDGET, BIGGER BECAUSE OF GENEVA, TAKEN TO COOLIDGE

Lord Arrives With Cost Estimates for Eight Approved Cruisers.

FIGURES HELD WITHIN $3,300,000,000 LIMIT

Departments' Requests Cut $125,000,000 Because of Defense Program.

By CARLISE BARGERON

(Staff Correspondent of The Post.)

Rapid City, S. Dak., Aug. 12.—Estimates for constructing the six cruisers already authorized and the two for which the keels already have been laid were brought to President Coolidge today by Budget Director H. M. Lord. Arriving at Rapid City early morning, the budget director made known that because of the failure of the Geneva conference the estimates for the Navy were the largest of the administration's recommended appropriations as prepared by him.

The figures which he brought to the President are within the $3,300,000,000 figure set by the President in June, he said. To come within this figure, however, it was necessary to slice $125,000,000 from the requests made by the various departments. Had the Geneva conference been successful the estimates for the Navy would have been much lower, he made known, as the President in that event would have checked the naval building program already authorized.

With no agreement being reached at the party, however, it was for him to estimate for the Navy with a view to carrying on the authorized program.

All eight of the cruisers are of the 10,000-ton class and are to be equipped with 8-inch guns. The naval estimates do not include items for the three big submarines authorized in 1916, the budget director said, as the Navy is still experimenting with them and did not seek any money at this time.

Insular Bureau Unlikely.

Although Secretary of the Interior Work has told the President that an insular bureau could be created by executive order, it is unlikely that the latter will take such action, it was made known today. The plan was for a bureau, preferably under the Interior Department, to administer to all the insular possessions, including the Philippine Islands.

President Coolidge has favored such a plan a long time, but he recently gave it as his impression that Congress did not seem to like the idea and that consequently he hardly would exert himself in its behalf. Then the Interior Secretary came along yesterday and told the President that legislation was not needed.

While the President never had definitely committed himself as to just where the proposed bureau should be located, Secretary Work said his department was the logical place for it, and the President agreed with him off-hand. But today the President let it be known that he would not take advantage of the Secretary's suggestion.

GIRL AVIATOR CRASHES FLYING UNDER BRIDGE

The Rasche Forced Down in Hudson When Her Engine Goes Dead.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 12 (A.P.).—Thea Rasche, German aviatrix, made a sudden descent into the Hudson River opposite here this afternoon when she was returning to New York from the Binghamton, N. Y., air carnival.

She was in a Flamingo plane, accompanied by her mechanic, H. P. Kreudner. Just after she flew under the central span of the Poughkeepsie railroad bridge, the engine went dead and the plane nose-dived into the river about 50 feet from shore.

Aaron Leroy, a ferry watchman, and Robert Barrett, a boatman, hurried out and rescued the pair, saving all their baggage. Neither Fraulein Rasche nor her mechanic was injured. The plane, however, sank except for the tail, and the damage could not be ascertained. Tugs and several rowboats attempted to raise it without immediate success.

3 German Planes Ready To Hop Off for America

State Department Notified of Projected Start—Unfavorable Weather Reported—French Fliers Unlikely to Fly Before Sunday.

(Associated Press.)

The Embassy in Berlin notified the State Department yesterday that final preparations were being made for the departure today between 6 and 8 p. m. of the monoplane Europa and Bremen and the biplane Germania bound for New York and Philadelphia with the possibility that Boston would be the destination of the Germania.

In making public the message, the State Department said it was understood the departure of the German planes was contingent upon weather conditions.

The message from Ambassador Schurman said: "Final preparations are being made for departure Saturday, August 13, between 6 and 8 p. m. of two Junkers monoplane from Dessau and one Caspar biplane from Cologne. Monoplanes are usual Junkers type with planes below fuselage and bear names Europa and Bremen. Biplane bears the name Germania. Monoplanes have wireless for receiving only, biplanes for sending and receiving. Destination, New York and Philadelphia, with possibility of Boston for Germania."

It was stated here today that the prospective simultaneous departures of the two German expeditions was merely a coincidence and was not by design. Dessau, Germany, Aug. 12 (A.P.).—Despite unfavorable weather, both the Junkers planes, which are being prepared for departure today, are being prepared for departure today.

RETIRED NAVAL OFFICER FOUND AMNESIA VICTIM

Man Discovered Wandering in New York Identified as Lieut. Comdr. Carter.

WAS MISSING SIX MONTHS

New York, Aug. 12 (A.P.).—Dr. Samuel Feigin, of the psychopathic department, Bellevue Hospital, said today that an elderly amnesia victim had been identified as Lieut. Comdr. Fidelio S. Carter, U. S. N., retired.

At the Naval Hospital, Brooklyn, to which the patient was transferred, however, the officer of the day said the identification was not positive.

Commander Carter, who is 74 years old, has been missing since February and has been the object of a quest by naval officials and the Missing Person Bureau for several weeks. He is a cousin of the late William G. Sharp, who was Ambassador to France.

The aged amnesia victim was found last Monday night wandering aimlessly about the Grand Central Station. He was unable to recall anything concerning his past. He had $22 in his pockets, although he said he had the impression that he usually carried a much larger sum.

The report of Commander Carter's disappearance was made here to police by an officer of the Union Club, of which he was a member.

At Bellevue Hospital efforts were made to identify the man as Commander Carter, but with only part success.

HAWAII HOP ENTRANT IS DASHED TO DEATH DURING TEST FLIGHT

Capt. A. V. Rogers, Former British Aviator, Dies in Monoplane.

THREE LIVES CLAIMED BEFORE DERBY START

Remaining Aspirants Are Undaunted as They Continue Preparing for Effort.

Municipal Airport, Oakland, Calif., Aug. 12 (A.P.).—The grim hand of death "scratched" another entrant from the running in the $35,000 Dole aerial derby to Hawaii today, when Arthur V. Rogers, former British army flier, crashed in his full cantilever monoplane, while on a test flight near Los Angeles.

With the wings of three airmen in the derby now clipped by tragedy within three days, the nine remaining aviators at Oakland runway seemed thankful for the unanimous consent agreement last night which caused the 2,400-mile race to be postponed from noon today until next Tuesday noon.

Rogers, who lived in Long Beach, Calif., dropped 125 feet when his machine went into a nose dive and fell like a rock. His wife waiting at the air field saw the accident. Rogers apparently had tried to use a parachute when his plane went wrong. His body was plucked up 200 feet from the demolished plane.

Only two days ago Lieutenants George W. D. Covell and R. S. Waggener, U. S. N., died while en route to the starting point in a smashup off Point Loma, San Diego, and yesterday the huge triplane, Pride of Los Angeles, was wrecked in San Francisco Bay, its crew of three narrowly escaped drowning.

Remaining Pilots Undaunted.

With a daring that was awe-inspiring, the remaining entrants continued to prepare for the race, taking the fatalistic attitude that they are safer in the air than on the ground.

The number "thirteen" has surrounded the race arrangements. Originally there were fifteen entrants. Two aviators never obtained planes after they posted entry checks, cutting the list to thirteen; the air derby will start in the thirteenth hour of the day; the original starting date would have landed them in Honolulu on the 13th. Lieut. Covell's monoplane was to have been the thirteenth starter.

The decision advancing the starting date gave fliers opportunity to snatch needed sleep today before resuming their tests. Even with the added time, however, it was apparent that all would not qualify by Tuesday.

The unanimous consent agreement changed the starting order in favor of those who qualify earliest, irrespective of the positions drawn originally. The zero hour in which planes may qualify will be Monday at 10 a. m., according to the agreement.

Starting Order Is Fixed.

The pilots' conference last night suggested was made to the airport management that field lights be maintained throughout the night after the fliers start, as some starters may develop trouble a few hundred miles out which would force them to put back to shore.

Four of the nine entrants passed all tests last night. They are: Bennett Griffin, flying the monoplane Oklahoma, who retained his place as first starter.

Norman Goddard, a naval lieutenant on leave from San Diego, flying a monoplane of special design. He starts second.

Maj. Livingston Irving, of Berkeley, who takes his monoplane into third starting order, a place originally assigned to Charles W. Parkhurst, of Le-mans, Ill.

Jack Frost, flying the San Francisco Examiner's yellow cigar-shaped monoplane, named "August." Frost is out of fourth place, moving up from last place. Frost's advancement was because he qualified fourth.

The agreement postponing the flight was made in order to give the entrants more time to prepare their equipment for the strenuous transoceanic journey.

Served in French Air Corps.

Alhambra, Calif., Aug. 12 (A.P.).—Capt. Arthur V. Rogers, killed when his plane, the Angel of Los Angeles, crashed near Montebello today, lived at Wilmar, near here, with his wife and little daughter. He was 29 years old.

Dynamite Hurling Charged to Autoists

Doylestown, Pa., Aug. 12 (A.P.).—Two men are in jail today following a 24-hour search by State police for a new type of pyridine-motorists who dashed through the Buckingham Mountain section setting off dynamite blasts.

They left a trail of shattered windows and damaged property and routed scores of persons from their beds. Four explosions occurred along the 10-mile route of the midnight riders.

John Radcliffe and Michael McGarry were those arrested. Both are employees of a stone quarry from which fourteen sticks of dynamite were stolen.

PURNELL, ON STAND, DETESTS WILD ORGIES AT HOUSE OF DAVID

Feeble Old Man Exhausted as He Breaks Long Silence
About Colony.

ACCUSATIONS OF GIRLS DENOUNCED AS FALSE

Admits Marrying "Queen
Mary" Without Divorcing
His Original Wife.

St. Joseph, Mich., Aug. 12 (A.P.).—Benjamin Purnell, leader of the House of David colony, today broke the silence which has characterized his attitude during years of litigation. Taking the stand in his own defense in the State's dissolution suit, he readily admitted he never obtained a divorce from the Kentucky hills girl he married 50 years ago, and later deserted to wed Mary, the present queen of the colony. State attorneys had produced witnesses with witness in unsuccessful efforts to substantiate their charge that Benjamin was a bigamist. It was the first time Purnell ever testified in colony court proceedings.

Aside from that lone admission Purnell denied all State allegations. He monotonously reiterated of "no" and "I never did," he claimed the State's accusations and the testimony of former girl colonists as "utterly false." In categorical order he flatly denied he was familiar with girl members, that he taught or believed in mysterious rites, that there was an "inner circle" of chosen Shiloh girls, that liquor and beer parties were held. He declared that the colony never misrepresented or defrauded members of their property. There were no mock courts to teach members to perjure themselves, he asserted. Stories of secret tunnels, walled-in hiding places, and wild and disgusting rituals to facilitate his escape in case of trouble, were branded as figments of some one's imagination.

Has Become Feeble Figure.
The Purnell who once was a dominating figure has shrunk to a gray-haired, sunken-eyed, feeble old man. He is 65 years old and looks 76. His voice was so weak the court stenographer, who was disgusted, was forced to repeat his answers for the benefit of counsel. Despite the outward evidence of weakness, however, his eyes when charged to disbelieve flashed fire at his accusers. Although a nurse hovered at his head, watching his every move, he frequently swung viciously at flicking lighted on his thinning whiskers.

Purnell was brought to the court in an ambulance. He carried him into the room on a stretcher. The witness stand was removed to make room for the cot. As he reclined and listened to the questions he rolled his head from side to side on the pillow as though impatient to have it over with.

Exhausted by Examination.
After being on the stand an hour and 30 minutes his nurse and defense counsel announced he was exhausted. His direct examination was completed, but State's Attorney George E. Nichols had barely scratched the surface of the cross-examination when the judge dismissed the witness for the day.

W. J. Barnard, chief defense attorney, announced Purnell will return for the completion of his cross-examination as soon as the physicians announce him physically able.

Purnell married his first wife, Angeline Brown, when he was 16 years old, in Greenup County, Ky. As a witness for the State his former wife declared Purnell "as shiftless and no good." He went on a visit and forgot to come back, she said. A few years later he married Mary Stollard, who now is Queen Mary.

"Did you ever get a divorce from your first wife?" asked Nichols.

"No, I didn't need any. My attorney told me according to law it was not needed," Purnell replied.

British Try to Walk To Coney by Subway

New York, Aug. 12 (A.P.).—An English family, consisting of R. C. Walton, his wife and daughter, started to walk to Coney Island today, using a subway for a foot path until James O'Donnell, subway motor-man, made an emergency stop to point out to them "the error of their way."

In England, the word "underground" or "tube" means what Americans know as the subway, and subway means a foot passage under a street or building, so when the Waltons decided to walk to the beach resort and were told that the subway would be the best way to get there they entered the Broadway subway of the Brooklyn-Manhattan line and started down the express tracks.

"I thought it odd that one must walk through such a dirty and unlighted place," Walton said, after he and his family had been safely placed on board a Coney Island bound train, "but of course I supposed the men who told me knew what they were talking about."

The motorman stopped his train when he saw the Waltons standing bewildered near the dangerous third rail.

JUBILEE OF PHONOGRAPH CELEBRATED BY EDISON

Inventor Repeats First Record, "Mary's Little Lamb,"
Over the Radio.

FELICITATED BY RULERS

West Orange, N. J., Aug. 12 (A.P.).—Crowned heads of Europe, governors of States, and business leaders throughout the world sent greetings to Thomas A. Edison today, the fiftieth anniversary of his invention of sound reproduction.

The anniversary was celebrated on the lawn of the Edison home at Llewellyn Park, where were gathered friends and eminent guests. A radio audience heard the electrical wizard repeat the nursery rhyme which in 1877 was recorded by him on the first disc.

"Mary had a little lamb, its fleece was white as snow," he spoke in his high pitched voice, smiling as if he seemed eager to please his unseen audience. The inventor appeared to enjoy the experience, although he said later he did not "like speaking over the radio."

It was the second time in his life that Edison spoke through a microphone and for the first time he spoke to an electrical workers' convention in Atlantic City last year he said "Good night" in response to requests for a radio speech.

Gov. A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey, presented the wizard with a bound volume of letters from the 48 governors of the United States and from rulers in Europe, eulogizing the service of the "greatest of inventors" to humanity, and sending personal greetings. France, Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia and Ireland were represented. Charles A. Edison accepted the volume on behalf of his father.

Fifty yellow roses, from Edison employees throughout the United States and Canada, were handed to the aged wizard by Miss Betty Atwell, of Boston.

Now in his eightieth year, Mr. Edison took great interest in the program, following the events on typewritten pieces of paper. He was dressed in his usual blue serge and a yellow Panama hat drawn down over the eyes. One shoe-lace dangled untied, throughout the morning.

INDIANA POLITICS.

The political camp into which the Indiana delegates to the next Republican convention will fall has been the subject of some recent and furious speculation. The stars of Hoover and Lowden have been reported in the ascendancy by several chroniclers, and lesser lights have been mentioned. The accounts have agreed unanimously on only one thing, and that is the strange silence of Senator Watson. According to some observers he is taking no part in the agitation caused by the President's withdrawal, and, according to others, will not engage in the fight for the delegation.

It is natural that Senator Watson should, for the moment, remain silent. Republican leaders in all the States are silent, pending developments. The statement that he is not taking a hand in shaping the Indiana delegation is much harder to believe. It is more reasonable to believe that he will know in due time to whom the delegation is going, and that it should become advisable in the course of the convention to switch to some other candidate. Senator Watson will not only be consulted but will issue the orders. A great many curious things may happen in Indiana, but renunciation of presidential politics by Senator Watson is not one of them.

PREVENTING PELLAGRA.

"When the Public Health Service began investigations about twelve years ago," says Surgeon General Cumming, "pellagra was generally regarded, even by the well-informed, as due either to a germ and, therefore, contagious, or to the use of too much corn products in the diet."

Not willing to accept the theory, the Surgeon General assigned Dr. Goldberger to ascertain the cause of and, if possible, a remedy for the disease which has threatened to assume serious proportions in the recently flooded districts of the Mississippi Valley. Dr. Goldberger has satisfied the medical profession that the disease is always caused by a faulty diet, and that the remedy is to be had in the addition of fresh milk, eggs and meat to the usual menu of "hog and hominy." Where it is difficult to obtain such additions the deficiency can be supplied by substituting canned beef and canned fish. Even fresh and dried yeast has been found of great value.

On the basis of the groundwork covered by Dr. Goldberger's researches the Public Health Service suggests to health authorities, and especially those in the recently flooded area, a dietary program for the prevention of pellagra. Without the result of the researches of the service the health authorities would be groping helplessly, "whereas they are now able to formulate a plan of procedure that is certain to be of value in preserving the health of the people." "Quite aside from the saving of life and the alleviation of suffering," says Gen. Cumming, "there will be a saving in money that can not be estimated, but which will certainly run into many millions of dollars."

FUTILE FIGURING.

The season of permutations and combinations in politics is at hand. There are only 531 electoral votes, but the ways of combining the units provided by the 48 States are manifold. Few totals are in agreement. Each partisan has his own list of certain, doubtful and adverse States, and nothing will convince him that he is wrong. There is a powerful fascination about such compilations. Politicians have been known to sit for hours with a paper and pencil proving to their own satisfaction all of the unknown equations that are never settled until election day.

The possibilities when the same system is applied to convention delegates are even greater. The Republicans in 1924 sent 1,109 delegates, and the Democrats had 1,093 votes represented at their gathering. The chances for speculation and error are, therefore, just twice as great in considering presidential candidates as in guessing which nominee will be the next occupant of the White House. Personal ambitions being more divided and intense, the "figuring" that precedes a convention is more active and varied than that of the days prior to the election. No candidate ever underestimates his strength. The total of the rival and conflicting claims would make the seating of the necessary number of delegates under one roof impossible.

Evidence of the progress which the Lowden and Smith booms have made in this statistical contest may be gained from the number of convention strength estimates already made. The various State delegations have already been classified definitely on many occasions and in many ways in behalf of the chief executive of New York. Lowden estimates are only in their beginning. It is only natural, then, to find that the latter are more modest than those advanced by Smith partisans. There would be no necessity for the Democrats to assemble, if the paper-and-pencil claims of Tammany were accepted even in part. The futility of opposing Lowden will be similarly demonstrated, no doubt, by the time his supporters have had a little more time and practice. Except for the fact that it demonstrates the fallibility of mathematicians and mathematics, the practice does no great harm. Moreover, it provides many of those on the outer fringe of politics with an excuse for existence.

DEPORT ALL SMUGGLED ALIENS.

The coming Congress will be concerned with the question of immigration laws. Even without the radical outbreaks that have marked the Sacco-Vanzetti case, the issue was a live one. There has been considerable legislative disagreement on the subject. Revision of quotas one way or the other has been advanced and debated. There is testimony to prove that the existing laws and machinery do not serve to accomplish their purpose. The agencies of the Government are kept busy guarding against the smuggling of aliens, and deporting those who have unlawfully passed through the boundaries.

Secretary Davis announced this week that he would ask the assistance of American employers in a check-up of aliens unlawfully in the United States. The National Industrial Council, with a membership of 75,000 employers, has promised its cooperation. The absence of naturalization papers can be easily established at the sources of employment. Radical affiliations may be learned. The proposal is a splendid example of what cooperation between the Government and the public may accomplish. But it is a question whether such a system will prove adequate to cure the present situation. Can voluntary cooperation be substituted for direct Government action to meet direct action in the form of violence? The Department of Labor considered at one time asking congressional authority for the registration of all aliens. Secretary Davis indicated in his most recent statement that he would not press such a proposal before the Seventieth Congress. A similar practice has long been in vogue in all of the major European countries. Aliens are forced to register with the police after a very limited period of time. Changes of address must be noted. The police are able at all moments to establish the whereabouts and activity of any individual. Length of residence is legally established. Failure to comply with the provisions of such laws is swiftly and adequately punished.

The enactment of similar legislation for the United States would serve as a useful adjunct to the existing immigration laws. Federal and municipal law enforcement authorities would be charged with its enforcement. A custom so universally observed could not draw objections from other nations if inaugurated here. It would classify all aliens beyond dispute and substitute exact facts for the guesswork that now characterizes the work of immigration and law enforcement officials.

The next Congress, meeting on the morrow of the outbreaks now taking place, ought to realize the necessity for such machinery. There can be no denial that aliens, whose presence here is questionable, have played a large part in the demonstrations against law and order. The Department of Labor and the administration should recognize this fact and press for action so essentially needed to rid the country of aliens who committed crime in sneaking into the country.

PHILADELPHIA'S COSTLY EXPERIENCE.

Philadelphia has at last come to the conclusion that expositions no longer meet with public favor. The experience that supports that conclusion was a costly one to the city. The municipal authorities appropriated $5,000,000 to pay some of the debts of the Sesqui-centennial. They are now intent upon salvaging what little they can from the buildings. The value of such assets has been well established by the work of the auctioneer. The representative of the exposition directors had difficulty in giving away some of the objects.

The auditorium, which is said to have cost $500,000 to construct, was sold once for $4,800, later withdrawn, and resold for $10,000. High street, the replica of Philadelphia in Revolutionary days, fetched $1,800. The concert organ, built especially for the exposition at a cost of $200,000, and said to be the fourth largest in the world, was disposed of privately for $25,000. All of the physical property remaining on the grounds, which cost millions to erect, will bring an estimated total of $234,000.

The presumption is that the costly lesson that Philadelphia has learned will now be brought home to the rest of the Nation. Only two or three of the many expositions that followed the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893 have been profitable ventures. In the majority of instances the promoters have had to assume heavy obligations. The losses of the Sesqui-centennial are the heaviest so far incurred. The greater part of the burden must be borne by the taxpayers of the city. Money for needed improvements has been diverted to pay the debts of the exposition. It will be a great many years before that city will be able to forget the Sesqui-centennial.

THE FLIGHT TO HAWAII.

Postponement of the air race to Hawaii for the Dole prize was dictated by common prudence. The three accidents, two of them fatal, suffered by prospective contestants, demonstrated the lack of preparation on the part of pilots and machines. Time is now available for thorough inspection of the airplanes and the capabilities of those who intend to make the flight. Entrants who are unable to measure up to rigid standards should not be permitted to take off from the Pacific Coast.

The spirit in which some of the participants contemplate the journey is a tribute only to their foolhardiness. Navigation by dead reckoning is all that some of the aviators expected to depend upon. The islands for which they are aiming are only a minute speck in the solitude of water over which they will fly. An error of a single point in direction would carry them far enough off their course to bring disaster. The matter of navigation is by far the most important element in the Pacific flight. Nor can the competitors say that it is their own affair if they choose to risk their lives in such a venture. Vessels in the Pacific at the time and the Hawaiian authorities will be in duty bound to render such assistance as they can to any of the fliers who may come to grief. The call of distress broadcast by Smith, when he feared his plane would be forced down, resulted in a general response and the loss of both time and money. In the present instance some of the fliers may fall in the ocean at widely separated points. The task of rescuing the unfortunates, even if successful, will fall upon agencies that have no interest in the flight. It is only fair to them and to the contestants that only those machines with better than an even chance of success should be allowed to start.

A SURVEY OF BEAUTY.

This time it is not one of the Federal departments that has established a "bureau of commercial research," but a private organization which has started out to accumulate all possible information upon the important subject of adorned beauty of the ladies of the land.

Letter carriers noticed this week that the weight of their mail sacks have been materially increased by the receipt from New York of thousands of envelopes bearing the card of the "Bureau of Commercial Research." Recipients of the envelopes find inclosed a questionnaire, which when filled out and returned to the senders will enable that useful society to enlighten the world upon the subject of the beauty of American women, especially as to their eyelashes.

The bureau asks each of its correspondents: "Do you use a preparation of any kind on your eyelashes?" and, if so, it is desired to know whether the preference is for cake, liquid or cream, and why do you like the one and dislike the other two? Also, it is desirable to report the shade of rouge preferred, if any, "dark orange, light orange, rose or evening."

Having propounded these rather personal questions, the bureau desires information as to whether the lady who thus reveals the inner secrets of her toilet is a "housewife, a business or professional woman, or if neither, what?"

It is to be regretted that this idea was not born in the mind of the Federal Trade Commission, the Tariff Commission, the Bureau of Efficiency, or one of the other "independent bureaus," thereby assuring the free country-wide distribution of the result of the survey.

WHAT BECOMES OF THE GRAPES?

As a general proposition, the crop reports of the Department of Agriculture attract very little attention from the public at large, however interesting they may prove to farmers and dealers in the particular crop concerned. On the other hand, the prospects for the grape harvest are of general interest to thousands who don't care a rap about the condition of cotton, wheat, corn, oats or even rice.

The news that "this season's total grape crop of some 2,500,000 tons probably will be at least 8 per cent heavier than last year's crop and 20 per cent above the average production of the last five years" will be hailed with satisfaction throughout the entire country. "Recent seasonal shipments of fresh grapes have amounted to 75,000 to 80,000 cars," says the latest grape crop report, and it is added that "many thousands of tons must be disposed of locally by drying or other manufacturing process." It is that "other manufacturing process" which is suggestive.

Following the enactment of the Volstead law grape growers of the Napa Valley and other districts of California, where wine grapes were cultivated, destroyed thousands of acres of vines. But within two years those vineyards had been replanted and many additional acres had been added. Grapes could be bought in New York during the season of 1917 at $10 to $12 per ton. During the last few years, in spite of the fact that the weekly receipts often reach a total of 2,500 carloads—ten times the amount absorbed by the market in prewar days—the prices have ranged between $60 and $100 a ton.

Evidently New Yorkers have developed "other manufacturing processes" in which the juicy product of the California vineyards is the "component part of chief value."

FINANCIAL HEALTH.

In order to keep constantly advised as to the condition of the national banks of the United States the Comptroller of the Currency periodically requires those institutions to report the condition of their funds at the close of business on a date specified. No bank is advised in advance of this call, but each must be ready to respond immediately. This uncertainty as to the date when a report will be demanded is maintained for the purpose of preventing any possible manipulation of accounts.

The response to the latest demand for a showdown by the 7,796 banks under the control of the Treasury Department shows total resources aggregating $26,581,943,000, which exceeds the figures of the corresponding day of 1926 by $1,266,319,000, from which it is easy to understand that the country is prosperous.

It is not the cash in the vaults that is the best business beacon, however. Idle money means business stagnation. Banks are prosperous in proportion to the extent of the interest-bearing loans that can be safely placed, so that the thermometer of business can best be read by the amount of money usefully employed. Of the resources of the banks which reported on June 30 more than one-half, or $13,955,696,000, represented loans. As in resources, the loan account shows a heavy increase as compared with the last day of June, 1926, when outstanding loans amounted to $13,417,674,000, or $538,022,000 less than this year.

The report indicates a thoroughly healthy financial condition throughout the entire country. The deduction to be drawn is that business is active and will remain so.

Secretary Hoover, as the youngest of the presidential possibilities, is one, at least, who feels no embarrassment about having a birthday anniversary.

The inability of a Tampa bank cashier to get himself indicted ought to be listed as one of Florida's attractions.

PRESS COMMENT.

And Accepted Thankfully.
St. Louis Post-Dispatch: Maybe Mr. Ford's new car will be an apology for the old one.

A Compliment.
Norfolk Virginian Pilot: Nowadays it is no reproach to a young man to be spoken of as tight.

Comes Higher.
El Paso Times: The air is just as free as it ever was. It just costs more to be able to breathe it.

Aha!
Albany Knickerbocker Press: Just wait till Wayne B. Wheeler hears about Mr. Coolidge's 10-gallon hat!

Money Talks.
Arkansas Democrat: The brain was made to think with, but the pocket-book is responsible for most of the decisions.

More Than Super.
Pittsburgh Gazette-Times: We'll agree that Mussolini is a superman. He succeeded in making the landlords reduce rents.

Certain Incomes.
Buffalo News: There are two kinds of annuity: One you buy from a trust company, and one a doctor has from some rich patient's "nerves."

It Stands Alone.
Philadelphia Inquirer: Some one points out there is no rhyme for spinach. This isn't surprising. Nothing else harmonizes with it, either.

Most of It.
Portland Oregonian: Much of this third-term talk seems to come from gentlemen who fear a third term would preclude them from a first term.

Forewarning.
Columbus Dispatch: A Wisconsin girl has killed a bear with a rolling-pin, but we doubt that the feat will bring her a single offer of marriage.

Air Races.
New York Evening Post: "Detroit and Chicago Mayors Plan Air Race." The same may be said of some of our senators when Congress convenes.

Rubbing It In.
Atlanta Constitution: We suppose the most painful thing that confronts a Floridian these days is that the planes are hopping off from the coast of California.

Don't Timber.
Minneapolis Journal: At a Tammany celebration, Gov. Al Smith was acclaimed as "standing shoulder to shoulder with Thomas Jefferson as presidential timber." As Jefferson is now a dead one, this looks something like a slam at Al.

Will the Buggy Come Back.
New York Evening Post: The mystery of the suspension of work at the Ford factory has been solved. Edsel Ford has just bought a horse and buggy. Driving on a road cluttered up with 15,000,000 Model T cars has evidently convinced him that there are cars enough in the world already.

Go Slow!
Brooklyn Citizen: We are prone to believe aviation has reached the stage of perfection and in this the glamour of recent aeronautical events is apt to delude us. The fact is aviation still has a long way to go, and the quicker we find out its weaknesses the quicker it will get there.

One on the Auto.
New York Sun: A Massachusetts windstorm lifted the carriage shed of a Congregational church from its foundation and hurled it across the road, crushing an automobile beneath the wreckage. Thus the old meets the new, the antique the modern; and the latest adornment of civilization comes off second in an encounter with a treasured institution of New England.

The Gloves of Rome.
Brooklyn Eagle: The Osservatore of Rome may condemn our prize fighting, but it must confess that this is the child's play compared with what the ancients did and the Roman Virgil delighted in describing. For example, when the old Entellus had his comeback and swatted Dares, he did it with a cestus on each fist made of stiff leather thongs interlaced with metal bands. That was something like inhuman sport.

The Business Situation.
Boston Post: There is a good deal of general complaint about poor business, and doubtless in certain sections industry is not as active as might be desired. For the country as a whole, however, general business must be running along at a pretty satisfactory pace. Car loadings of revenue freight are probably the best measure of industrial activity in this country.

Last week loadings of freight exceeded 1,000,000 cars for the eleventh week this year. In 1926, by the same date, there were only six weeks with loadings in excess of 1,000,000, and in 1925 there were none.

Evidently it could hardly be said that business this year is falling behind the volume done in previous years.

Car Loadings.
Boston Post: There is a good deal of general complaint about poor business, and doubtless in certain sections industry is not as active as might be desired. For the country as a whole, however, general business must be running along at a pretty satisfactory pace. Car loadings of revenue freight are probably the best measure of industrial activity in this country.

Possibilities of Wireless.
Philadelphia Public Ledger: Nicola Tesla, "wizard of wireless," predicts new uses for wireless energy, which indicate that the scientific development of that field has barely begun. In his opinion, airplanes and airplanes, unhampered by heavy engines and tanks of fuel, but instead propelled by light

Drugs and Water

By ROBERT QUILEN

A LITTLE of man returns to dust; the rest is liquid. The story of the ancient whose strength doubled when he fell to earth was based on truth. Contact with the soil gives new vigor.

But water is man's natural element, also. Swimming is the exercise in which he can indulge without overheating. Swimming is the one exercise that leaves him relaxed, rather than merely tired, and the one exercise that gives him at once a rejuvenated appetite.

Now consider the relation of water to nerves. Nerves are the present curse of America. You may blame the war, or the speed craze, or prosperity; but there the fact is. We are a nation afflicted with nerves.

Your physician will tell you that an opium addict who is denied his drug suffers more from nerves than other people can realize. His flesh crawls; he cramps; every reawakening nerve writhes.

Yet in at least two Northern cities there are institutions where addicts who have been taking from 5 to 30 grains of morphine each day are deprived of their drug and kept from suffering.

How? They are kept in baths at body heat from the time they awake in the morning until bedtime. One institution treats an average of almost 500 patients a month. Not one receives a particle of morphine; not one suffers.

If these poor creatures can thus soothe tortured nerves, why not lesser sufferers.

There are dozens of drugs in America, not opium derivatives, that quiet nerves and induce sleep. They have an enormous sale and all are habit forming. You can't lean on any drug without learning to depend on it.

Then why take a chance? Man makes drugs; God gave you water. When you feel an urge to tie yourself in a knot or scream, get into a tub up to your neck, water at body heat, and let nature do her stuff.

One advantage of being 6 years old. When she jilts you, you can soothe your broken heart by throwing rocks at her.

Americans hate to take orders. The only sure way to stop them from drinking is to make drinking compulsory.

Correct this sentence: "Pardon me for mentioning it," said the traffic cop, "but you ran past my stop sign. Will you please be more careful in the future? Thank you very much."

electric motors receiving their power by wireless transmission from generating stations on the earth, will some day circle the world. He believes that in the future power for manufacturing and for light and heat will flow freely through the air. The moisture precipitated by wireless energy may cause deserts to bloom. Battleships may be equipped with unseen rays many times more powerful than the biggest guns the world knows today. These are a few of the accomplishments by which he predicts science will be able to push back the frontiers of the air.

Jazz Then and Now.
Philadelphia Record: The director of a local concert orchestra which does considerable radio broadcasting is disgusted by the inroads of jazz. "If Jenny Lind were to broadcast here tonight," said he, "she would have to sing musical comedy hits if she arranged her program according to the requests we have." Well, there is nothing new or startling about that. When Jenny first came to this country, under the management of P. T. Barnum, she had to include in her repertoire songs which were the equivalent then of what we now know as musical comedy hits. It will be recalled, too, that when Adelina Patti made her last tour of this country, under the management of Charles K. Harris, she discovered to her dismay that she would have to give place on her program to that most commonplace, sentimental ballad, "After the Ball," which was written and composed by Mr. Harris. When the song sheet was handed to Mme. Patti she exclaimed, "Oh, oh, oh!" But it was pointed out to her that the matter was covered by a clause in the contract she had signed, and she had to go through with it.

STREET CARS COME BACK.
Electric interurban railways are coming back, according to the Lebanon Reporter. In recent years they have been hard pressed by motor vehicles. Statistics show that the private automobile has given them about four times as much competition as the motorbus, and the two combined have made the electric railways' profits vanish and their very existence precarious.

The railways now have got their second wind and are going to fight back, not in any mean way, but by giving better service and by using the most up-to-date sales methods.

First, they are improving the cars themselves, making them better looking and more comfortable. Next, they are advertising extensively and interestingly by means of car cards, station cards, newspaper publicity, safety meetings, new uniforms for conductors, and so on. They are telling everybody whom they hope it may concern that electric transportation is more dependable in all weathers than motor transportation, that it is safer and cheaper, having its own right of way and its own well-trained operators.

It is probably true that the electric railways have a real place to fill in the modern transportation system. But in this competitive world they have to do something more than keep their cars moving. The public likes to be told all about what it gets for its money. That's the result of the era of superadvertising and super-salesmanship of recent years.

SHIP MODELS.
We are at a loss to explain the origin and growth of the ship model's popularity in recent years, says the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel. Not only in the United States, but in many other countries, public fancy has given its approval to these articles as items of decorative art for the home and office and public buildings. Who started the craze—maybe that's not the best word—or just how it gained so much momentum nobody seems able to say. As one novelty after another claims the public's attention, its fancy swings to new objectives. And once that fancy has favored a particular article, it becomes commercial immediately.

Large factories in this and other lands are working six days a week turning out ship models. Hundreds of other models are being made by hand every day. The better models are not merely faddish decorations. They are useful for instructing both children and adults in the equipment and design of the sailing vessels, once so numerous and now so rare in ocean traffic. Maybe one strong reason for their popularity is to be found in the strong appeal they make to the romantic spirit of adventure.

A New Silver Boom.
Agricultural Progress: Mederic Beaupreant, when clearing his farm in Caldwell township, south of Verner, on the Canadian Pacific line, found a 300-pound boulder which was half native silver and worth about $300. The discovery has aroused considerable interest among mining men in Cobalt and elsewhere, who are arriving in numbers.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

One Flag for the U. S. A.
To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We, the undersigned, members of the Army and Navy Veterans Association of this city, an organization composed of soldiers, sailors and marines who have honorably served our country in her wars of the past years, wish to thank you for your very appropriate picture on today's editorial page of The Post, entitled "Under Which Flag?" This picture is to the point and speaks volumes. It should be seen by our entire city population, and, in fact, it is worthy of being seen by the whole people of the United States. It speaks for pure American patriotism, and we feel sure that all who may see it will take the same view that we do.

A Roster Reads the Riot Act.
To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Clark Griffith certainly has a strange sense of humor. According to a statement given the press, he has wired Ben Johnson demanding that Rowland be removed as umpire during the present series between the Yanks and the Nats, saying that he is unwilling to accept responsibility for Rowland's safety, &c. Mr. Harris, as manager of the team, is supposed to use his head in emergencies and to set an example for the rest of his men. Any of the kids on an "insect" team knows that when the ump says "strike three" you are out. As one who has a sentimental wager on each game, the series, and, as a matter of fact, on Washington to win the pennant, I hope, for the sake of the loyal rooters, that Speaker or some one who can handle him in a pinch, is put in charge of the team.

Here we are at the top and with a chance to drag the Yanks back to us and the leader of our team kicks himself out of the game. This is no time for a display of temper. Can you imagine any of the "brave" guys who threw bottles, &c., at Rowland meeting him outside the ball park? I should say not. They are the kind of desperadoes who would shoot a man in the back. Let's get together and win these next games.

CHESTER JOHNSTONE.

The Biggest Issue of All.
To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With tax reduction, farm relief, flood prevention and ridding the country of the anarchists the Seventieth Congress is likely to have its hands full. Tax reduction, relief for the farmers and the flood sufferers are important and call for the exercise of sound statesmanship, but ridding the country of anarchists is more important than the other three combined. Tax reduction, flood relief and help for the farmers can wait—in fact, can be ignored altogether—without danger to the country, but not so with the remaining proposition—expelling anarchism.

We are now brought face to face with the one great danger to the country, to the Government, to the proposition that government is necessary for the people. The presence of anarchism in the country is not a delusion, not a phantasm. The recent disturbances in various sections of the country were all inspired by enemies of the country. The claim to the populace is sympathy with Sacco and Vanzetti, but that is only a pretense. The anarchist leaders are simply taking advantage of that case to foment enmity toward the Government. It is a condition which demands the mailed hand. Longer indulgence of these agents of sovietism will be criminal. There must be but one flag in the United States.

Parking a Danger to Children.
To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a father I want to thank you for the article in regard to reckless and drunken drivers, and their easy escape from punishment. I earnestly hope your article will have some effect in influencing laws that will protect our children. The citizen has so little to say in the use of the streets and administering of affairs in the District.

I also have before me a clipping headed "Safety of Children," which describes the killing of 8 and maiming of 231, which is largely accounted for by the immunity described in The Post. I have hoped and watched long for the newspapers to take up this question of parked cars along the curbs. It is impossible for a child to see an oncoming car, but the spirits of those dead children are surely pointing to those dead children and saying, "You are guilty in permitting these death traps."

On the street where I live there are solid lines, both sides of the street daily, until 4:30, and around that hour not uncommon ~ see them standing three and four abreast. I live in terror daily of getting a phone call that one of my children has been run down. There are a great many children in this block. So far I only know of four being knocked down and not seriously hurt.

We often see articles warning parents to keep children off the streets. It is impossible to keep children off the street. The greatest danger is that they will dart out between parked cars to recover a ball or a toy, and as a driver can not see the child until it has cleared the parked car, and the child can not see the oncoming auto until it has cleared the parked car, it is death for the child if they both get there at the same time.

Why should this abuse be allowed? Why should the taxpayer who was forced to pay for the covering of the street have the use of that street at least part of the day and not have the curb lined all day by parked cars, many of whose owners live outside the District? It is only fair to the children to give them a little show for their lives.

The Private Life of Helen of Troy

A SATIRE ON MODERN LIFE THROUGH THE LIPS OF THE ANCIENTS

By JOHN ERSKINE

HELEN, an ancient lady with modern ideas.

MENELAOS, her husband while she stayed at home.

HERMIONE, her daughter and several critics.

CRETEUS, her nephew — young enough to be a reformer; old enough to have ambitions.

ETONEUS, gate-keeper by calling; philosopher by instinct; moralist by observation.

ADRASTE, handmaiden and friend to Helen, scandal "o' most everybody else. CHARITAS, the lady next door.

CHASTOR, a boy who strayed from the family door-step.

Helen, feeling that Hermione is wholly lacking in the science—and, possibly, the art—of love, has been drawing on her own large store of knowledge of his precious son!

Let me tell you this, dear wife—if I had loved you the way they love women, you wouldn't be here now. That night in Troy, I would have cut your throat!

"There, Hermione, didn't I tell you?" said Helen. "You do begin to understand me, Menelaos, and as times goes on, I know you better. You didn't spare the woman you loved; you preserved me as an object of art!"

"I don't know why I spared you, but whatever the reason, you don't deserve the kindness, and you don't appreciate it. You've expressed your admiration for high-handed husbands once or twice to my father, and I know you're not a quail with him."

"Have him come later then," said Helen. "If he comes in the next few days, or even weeks, he may arrive just when you ought to go to your brother."

"My brother won't need me," said Menelaos. "He can take care of himself, or if he wants help, Orestes is on the way."

"On the way where?" said Hermione. "How do you know that?"

"Why, Eteoneus got in touch with him and lent him some weapons of mine, and he went off quite a while ago to fight the Trojans."

"Oh, why didn't you go yourself to Agamemnon?" cried Hermione. "You could have done good."

"I thought of going myself," said Menelaos, "but my mother advised me not to."

"I did advise you so," said Helen, "but you ought not to have taken my advice. At least, I thought less of you for taking it. Achilles would not have been so prudent, and I'm sure Pyrrhus wouldn't be. I advised you for your own safety—told you of danger and of possible ruin."

"You are quite right, Hermione," said Helen. "It is useless for Pyrrhus to come now, Menelaos. I doubt if you'd better look up Pyrrhus here in view of the heated arguments we're having, and the emotions that are running high in the family now. Some discourtesy might happen, and he takes offense at it. Your reputation would suffer."

"I'll take care of my reputation," said Menelaos. "You're a fine one to advice me how to protect my name? Where did you learn the art?"

"You are unduly," said Helen. "Permit me to suggest that a failure to get on well with Pyrrhus would raise the question among our friends whether there mightn't be something to say for previous guests of yours who didn't get on well with you. You should be able to point to at least one young man who came to you as a guest and left as a friend."

"The only negligence I contributed in the case of Paris," said Menelaos, "was that I trusted you out of my sight. I shan't do it again. Whether Pyrrhus leaves or not, can't you stay here and I guarantee he leaves this house alone. He won't take Hermione with him, and he won't take you. If you behave yourself there'll be no quarrel with him."

"I don't know why I spared you, but whatever the reason, you don't deserve the kindness, and you don't appreciate it. You've expressed your admiration for high-handed husbands once or twice to my father, and I know you're not a quail with him."

BEAUTY AND YOU

By VIOLA PARIS

DEAR VIOLA PARIS: Ever since I can remember I have had this upper lip. I have tried massaging, but with no satisfaction. Otherwise I am well proportioned.

E. R. R. Answer: I had a similar problem put to me by a correspondent who signs herself "A Daily Reader." It is not always an easy one to solve. Often it is just a case of general thinness—though this does not happen to be so with E. R. R. Her lips are normal.

Massage will not do the work, but I think that exercise will. If you could take a regular course of exercise under the direction of a good teacher of stage dancing or acrobatics, that would be excellent. Could you take simple Russian dance steps? They are good for developing the legs. At least you can take the following exercise each day:

1. Putting one hand on some stationary object for support (later this will not be necessary), squat on the heels. Try to extend first one foot then the other without losing balance.

2. Lie face downward, lifting the upper part of the body off the floor with the arms. Holding this position, run in place, extending the legs as vigorously as possible.

Dear Viola Paris: Will you tell me a safe bleach for my neck and arms? Is there anything that will cover up a light brown birthmark?

J. H. Answer: The standard bleaching lotions and creams that are made by reputable specialists can be used with-out fear. The only bleaches that are too strong for many skins are those that claim to remove tan or freckles almost immediately. A bleaching process, in order not to be injurious, is a gradual one. A cut lemon rubbed over the skin is a very simple and very good expedient.

I do not believe that there is anything that you can use that would satisfactorily conceal a birthmark. If I were you, I should make up my mind not to be self-conscious about it. It is really a very slight matter and not worth devoting any time to other people as it probably is to yourself.

T-B OF THE JOINTS. Mrs. E. R. R. writes: What is tuberculosis of the joints? What joints does it infect? Knees, ankles, wrists? What is the cause, and is there any cure? What is the ultimate result of this kind of tuberculosis? Does it happen only in persons over 80 years of age?

REPLY. Tuberculosis of the joints is due to the tubercle bacillus. It is generally caused by drinking raw milk from infected cows. Injury is often a contributing cause. It may develop at any age. It is often cured. In fact, cure is the rule. Stiffness of a joint, loss of bone or even loss of a limb may result, though that is not the usual outcome.

Nap of Churchgoer Interrupts Prayer. Madill, Okla., Aug. 12.—A Madill churchgoer drew his car up to the church window on a recent warm Sunday morning and settled comfortably in the cushions to listen to the sermon.

The sermon closed and the pastor began to pray, when a long, insistent blare of an auto horn cut him short. A deacon, dispatched to end the din, found his brother member asleep across the steering wheel, his head resting on the horn button.

21-Year-Old Sheriff Takes Father's Place. Poplar Bluff, Mo., Aug. 12 (A.P.).—Baker County, Mo., has a 21-year-old sheriff.

He is Ray McCowan and he succeeded his father, T. D. McCowan, who died after serving a year and a half of a four-year term.

Young McCowan's present from his father on reaching his majority was a duly signed commission as deputy sheriff. The father died shortly afterward.

"I'll be so glad to get back to the city, Polly, won't you?" says Mitzi, as the train whizzes through the mountains. "For one thing, all the shops are showing the new fall things." It's true. Though why Mitzi should want a newer hat than the one she wears seems comprehensible. The design of leaves is painted on the felt in another color. Polly's felt with the turned up side and the irregular brim is also smart. Poor, poor Dad. There's not the slightest chance of his being nice and lonely any more. There'll be bills and bills coming to the house every day to remind him that his daughter is home.

Eve in Paris

DEAR CHARLIE: The summer is wearing on and I am wearing out. Paris in August is no place for an irritable fashion observer. So every opportunity that offers itself I seize and rush away. Le Touquet was the most recent addition to my list—an it is quite an addition! There one sees quantities of beauties, all completely chic and satisfying to watch. Took tea in the courtyard of the mandarin, and I was fairly dizzy watching the world pass by. There was so much to see and sketch that I ended by devoting my time to searching out amusing details.

At the top I have sketched a smart gray kasha sports coat. The clever handling of the tucks accounts for its chic and individuality.

The blouse with the bow at the neck was worn with a pleated skirt to match. The four lines of cording meet in a point in the front and slope down and around the back.

The skirt is of a lady who carried a tennis racket, but I have my suspicions that the racket was only local color. Her frock, however, was most becoming and attractive. The small box pleats run all the way to the hem. The lines of stitching that serve to hold the pleats flat from a V-shape yoke that extends about 7 inches below the shoulder. The frock had no sleeves and was made in heavy white crepe de chine. With it she wore a brilliant green galuchat belt, and that was the only note of color or trimming.

Love, EVE.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

IF THIS BE LUCK.

If it be luck to toll and plan And face the sneers of every man Because a dream has urged you on When hope and strength and heart were gone,

And day and night and year by year To see one beacon bright and clear Which all the others can not find And 'gainst their doubt to steel your mind

At last to reach the goal alone! Then tell me when is courage shown?

If it be luck, as oft we hear When one has dared to pioneer And face the terrors of the new, Of brave adventures deed to do: When he, by risking all, defies The whispered cautions of the wise

At last to reach that distant shore Where man has never stood before. If this be luck, then tell to me You scoffers, what can courage be?

If it be luck a book to pen Which reached to the souls of men Or paint a picture which shall give Delight so long as art shall live Or into any thought or deed To build a dream or shape a creed,

If this be luck, and all the years Of agony and toil and tears So lightly are dismissed from view, What greater things can courage do?

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES McDONALD

DEAR Miss McDonald: Your column has interested me more than once but especially recently when you have been giving the real meaning of love. Now Miss McDonald, I am writing you this because I believe you can help me in a way that no other can. I have been married for over three years, and at present I am not living with my wife. She left me at a time when I was out of employment and could not get work at any cost. I do not drink or run around, always at home nights. She was working the time to partly support her people and was making a very good salary. She got independent and left me without a penny or a place to sleep. Now Miss McDonald, since she left she has come back and asked me to come back and live together again. We started in to go together like sweethearts to make arrangements to start life anew. At first she would treat me fine and then all of a sudden she would get as cold as ice. She would act just as if she did not care whether I was with her or not, and of course I would get disgusted and believe she did not love me and stop coming. But as soon as she found out where I was she came after me again. I have tried going with her four different times since we were separated and every time she treats me the same—crazy about me at first and then in a few weeks just gets tired of acts that way. Shows no affection and of course we break. She says she loves me but in a different way than I love her. Can a woman really love a man as a wife should love and act this way? I love my wife more than anything in this world. Please publish this as soon as possible with many thanks. I am waiting for your answer. DISHEARTENED.

Your wife, in common with many other wives, married to have an escort located conveniently near. Love had no part in the matter. When you failed in the matter of supplying the money, and acting the escort, no sympathy for your plight assailed the dear lady. Instead she packed up the furniture and left you to despondency. Not only does she not love you, but she lacks any feeling for you whatever. In fact she has elements of decency seem lacking in her. You say, however, that you love her, so you probably really love her. And if you love her, that is probably the best thing for you to do. But nail down securely those pieces of furniture as you may treasure, and have a bed built into the house itself, for future emergency. Fortune might turn upon you again for a spell, and "tis well to be prepared. Love! However terribly misused that word "and marriage," how few know its meaning who embark upon its stormy seas. I wish that I might help you, dear man, but I don't know whether he is really an expert, or only expert at impressing people (who don't know) with his impressiveness. Whenever I find my host is proud of his books, say, for what they cost instead of for their real value of authorship, or editors, or printing, or illustration, or binding, I am pitifully sorry for that man, who has misused all the pleasures of possession because he keeps his intelligence in his pocket.

Mr. Work's Pointer On Auction Bridge

The pointer for today is: WITH A STRONG HAND CONTAINING BUT ONE STOPPER IN THE ADVERSE SUIT, NO TRUMP SHOULD BE CALLED IF PARTNER HAS BID.

Yesterday's Hand

♠ 10-5-3-2
K-4-3
A-Q-7
A-Q-10

My answer slip reads as follows:

No. 17. South (Dealer) should bid No. 10 Trump.

No. 18. South one Heart; West should double.

No. 19. South one Club, West one Heart; North should bid one Trump.

No. 20. North pass, West one Heart, North pass; East should bid one No Trump or pass.

My reasons in support of these declarations are:

No. 17. Clearly a Dealer's No Trump. No. 18. With but one stopper in the adverse suit, a double is better than a bid. Five Club tricks are assured and partner must have at least the Ace of Spades—probably greater side strength. A situation in which No Trump should be bid even with only one stopper in the adverse suit.

No. 20. Very close between one No Trump and a pass. The pass, fully in accordance with the rules of bidding, would be perfectly sound and could not be criticized. The hand, however, looks as if a No Trump might produce better

LUTHERANS' POLICY ON RELIGIOUS UNITY BARRED AT LAUSANNE

General Secretary Tells World Congress Attitude of His Communion.

TWO CATHOLIC PRIESTS OBSERVERS AT PARLEY

Anglican Spokesman Presents Apostolic Succession Theory of Church.

Lausanne, Switzerland, Aug. 12 (A. P.).—The ministry of the church to the world was discussed from various viewpoints at today's session of the world conference on faith and order.

The Rev. M. G. G. Scherer, of New York, general secretary of the United Lutheran Church in America, discussed the Lutheran attitude toward the church.

"The Lutheran attitude in regard to policy," he said, "may be described as liberal, eclectic and neither Episcopal, Presbyterian, nor Congregational, as of divine ordinance, but freely appropriating elements from all sides and having something in common with each."

While admitting the possibilities of church unity under the Episcopal theory of government, Mr. Scherer said that the Lutheran position is that "since there is no express command of God in this matter, the church is free, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, to determine its policy according to the circumstances and requirements of the time and place. If, however, the Lutherans should be called upon to consider the possibility and desirability of turning to episcopacy they would desire a conference on the following questions:

Questions Lutherans Ask.
"First—Will the change involve acceptance of the sacerdotal theory of ministry?"

"Second—Will subscription to the necessity of Episcopal ordination be required?"

"Third—Must the theory of apostolic succession be received?"

"Fourth—Will the step lead logically to acknowledgment of the primacy of the Pope, and, finally, in view of recorded history and of present conditions, is there reason to believe that, without unity of faith, the episcopate will be able to prevent schism?"

The Right Rev. Edwin James Palmer, bishop of Bombay, discussed the Christian ministry from the Anglican viewpoint. He argued in favor of the theory of apostolic succession, and said that bishops inherit their authority from the apostles and a minister not ordained by a bishop still is a layman.

"Join Calvin," said the bishop, "made a most amazing mistake, for an able man, when he tried to reform the church by reconstructing it after the pattern of the apostolic age, minus the apostles."

"The church is not a democracy, but a monarchy, and Christ is its king. The church is not a school of thought, but a living body. Christ gave to the church, not a written word but himself, the living Word—ideas only, but men filled with ideas."

"Let us rise to irrationality or naturalism, our conception of the church. It is a supernatural society."

Catholic Observers Present.
It was decided to organize committees to prepare reports on the subjects of the church's ministry, the sacraments, and the unity of Christendom and the relation to it of existing churches. The Bishop of Gloucester was named convener of the first of these committees, and the Rev. Canon and Archbishop Soderstrom of Upsala, Sweden, of the other two, respectively.

Arrangements have been made to broadcast the impressive services next Sunday at Lausanne Cathedral, at which speakers will discuss the necessity of Christian unity for the church's missionary enterprise.

Two Catholic priests are closely following the deliberations of the world conference on faith and order, it was revealed today.

Although their church is not officially represented, the priests have been admitted to the open sessions of the conference, and the delegates as sort of unofficial observers. They also have access to the minutes and reports of the conference.

Both have admitted that they would report to the Vatican. As they speak several languages, the priests are able to follow the proceedings without interpreters.

They are Father Max Metzger, of Graz, Austria, and Father Herman Hoffmann, of Breslau, Germany.

tion with other departmental shifts that creation of the bureau would cause, most likely would be necessary, the President said, and he believes that the legislation should come before and not after the job.

Visitors Still Arriving.
The steady flow of official visitors to see the President continued today, Secretary of Labor Davis coming in by train from Huron, after having flown to that place from Mooseheart, Ill. He talked over immigration and labor conditions with the President.

He made known that in the situation between this country and Canada arising from restriction against foreign-born Canadian citizens living in border cities and working in this country, the persons were treated the same as other aliens and denied entrance.

Under a rule that has been promulgated by the Labor Department, they now are issued temporary identification and entrance cards and permitted to come and go as they please. In Buffalo and Detroit some 8,000 foreign-born Canadian citizens are involved, it was said. Congress will have to pass legislation backing up the rule, the department, however, the Labor Secretary said.

The Labor Department also plans to legislate dealing with original aliens under the jurisdiction of the States, the Secretary said. As it stands now there are about 100,000 aliens in Federal and State institutions, and are all subject to deportation when they have served their sentences. But as nearly all States have parole systems, the majority of the aliens are freed before the expiration of their sentences, the Federal authorities are said to be handicapped in dealing with them.

Power Over Sacco and Vanzetti.
For instance, a State paroling a prisoner maintains jurisdiction over him until the time of his sentence has expired. No trouble is experienced in dealing with Federal prisoners.

Mr. Davis would not discuss the Sacco-Vanzetti case, insisting that his department had absolutely nothing to do about it. In answer to direct question, though, he said his department does have the deporting power in such cases. There have been no cases here that Gov. Fuller, of Massachusetts, might pardon the two men and then the Federal government would immediately deport them.

But it is made plain that the Federal Government would not be made party to any such plan. The Massachusetts governor let the men go, then the Federal government most likely would deport them, but no one in authority has suggested to the governor that an arrangement of this kind would be the best way of settling the matter. It would lower the dignity of this country's institutions, it is explained.

Coolidge Hopes to Visit Brookings, S. D., on Return

Rapid City, S. Dak., Aug. 12 (A. P.).—President Coolidge, who is on his way to Washington, to dedicate the new Lincoln Memorial Library at South Dakota State College. He also has been invited to pay Aberdeen, S. Dak., a visit on his way back, but Mr. Coolidge thinks the Aberdeen stop will be the only one he can make.

The President is deeply interested in the agricultural development of South Dakota, and he has been told by the Chamber of Commerce showing how dairying is taking an important part in the agricultural pursuits of the State has been presented to Mr. Coolidge and he believes additional investigations along this line would prove very beneficial.

South Dakotans who are calling on this State are urging him to make this State his permanent home when he leaves office. To C. D. Kimball and J. H. McKeever, editors of the Aberdeen American News, who made this suggestion today, the President answered with a smile that he would consider it, at the same time showing their picture of his home in Vermont.

F. C. Christopherson, editor of the Sioux Falls Press, who is president of an association of daily newspaper editors in this State, declared South Dakota editors generally are accepting Mr. Coolidge's recent political announcement to mean that he intends to retire from the White House.

This President and Mrs. Coolidge received the South Dakota editors and their wives at the summer White House this afternoon.

President Coolidge is hopeful that he will be able to visit the Government irrigation project near Newell, S. Dak., and attend a fair there September 2. He was greatly interested in the dry-farming experiment station at Ardmore, S. Dak., and now desires to see how crops are growing in the irrigated sections.

John Coolidge Off On Visit to Father

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 12 (A. P.).—John Coolidge, son of the President, who has completed his second season at the University of Vermont summer school, left today for Springfield, where he will join his parents in the Black Hills. He said he expected to stay there until about September 1 when he would return to his studies at Amherst College.

La Follette Disbelieves Coolidge's Renunciation

Madison, Wis., Aug. 12.—Senator Robert M. La Follette in a statement today declared the announcement of President Coolidge that "I do not choose to run for President in 1928" was a clever piece of political maneuvering.

"Since the announcement has been made," Mr. La Follette said, "many interpretations have been placed upon his statement. I believe the President's most intimate friends would think the announcement is pure political bombast."

But, Mr. La Follette, ex-senator from Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National Committee, the President's closest political adviser, says that Mr. Coolidge will take the nomination if it is handed to him.

The great army of Federal job holders, the party henchmen and the labor leaders have taken their cue from Chairman Butler and the campaign is to create a demand for Coolidge which will be irresistible."

The Housekeeper

We do have such recipes, Mrs. Ward, any number of them, in fact, and you are perfectly right that at this time of the year when fish dishes seem particularly suitable. And we've not had many of them, which makes your suggestion particularly timely. You can guess, I presume, the source from which these fish dishes today are to go forth to you. The fish contest, of course, they are the "best recipes" of any number of our good friends in this city and its environs.

The first comes to us from Mrs. O'Connell, of 1 street northwest:

Tuna Fish Souffle.

1 can tuna fish
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon paprika
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon chopped onion
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
2 eggs
2 tablespoons bread crumbs.

Turn the tuna fish onto a plate and drain off the liquor. Remove the skin and bones and break into flakes. Blend the butter and flour in a saucepan over the fire and add milk and stir until thick and smooth. Add seasonings, onion and parsley and stir over the fire for a few moments. Set aside and when cooled stir in egg yolks and fold in stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Turn into a greased fireproof dish, sprinkle crumbs over the top and bake in a hot oven from ten to fifteen minutes. Serve hot. This amount will serve five or six persons if a fairly large can of tuna fish is used.

Fish Pie, Without Crust.

It can be made out of any kind of cold boiled fish; whitefish is the nicest. Save the water in which the fish has been cooked, pick the flesh of the fish in quite small pieces with a fork, let brown in a saucepan, add chopped onion with one tablespoon of butter. Sprinkle over this two tablespoons of flour, add a cup of the soup stock and salt and pepper to taste. Beat in a separate dish the yolks of two eggs and add to them two tablespoons of melted butter. Add the fish and pour the whole into the saucepan, but keep below the boiling point. Stir well and place on the back of the stove. Roll some stale bread and place in the bottom of a baking dish. Pour in the cooked ingredients and sprinkle more bread crumbs over the top. Bake with two tablespoons of melted butter and bake in a moderate oven until nicely browned. Serve hot.

KATHERINE BOND.
Fredericksburg, Va.
Fish Chow Chow.

1 medium tomato.
1 small onion.
1 sweet green pepper.
1/2 cup chopped celery.
2 cups flaked fish.
1 cup potato water.
2 hard-boiled eggs.
Bit chopped parsley.
Butter.
Flour.
Seasoning.

Slice, salt and sugar slightly one medium size firm tomato, dip in flour and fry in butter until brown. To this add one small onion finely diced and browned in the butter, also the meat of one sweet green pepper which has been chopped and parboiled and a half cup of parboiled chopped celery. Add to this one cup of potato water and two cups of left-over shad, halibut or good canned fish. Add a large lump of butter, season to taste and thicken with oven-browned flour. Serve on toast, garnish with hard-boiled egg cut lengthwise, a bit of chopped parsley and a dash of paprika. This amount will serve about four people.

MRS. V. L. HURDLE.
Washington.

Our next fish recipe is to be an unusual one, which comes to us from Mrs. Vincente Bunsan, Washington.

Shrimp Croquettes With Vegetables.
(Filipino Style)

1/2 pound shrimp.
1/2 cup fat pork.
1/2 cup flour.
1 egg.
1/2 teaspoon salt.
1/2 teaspoon pepper.
1/2 regular size cauliflower.
1/2 pound fresh mushrooms (or dried Chinese mushrooms).
3 green onions.
1 can bamboo shoots (may be omitted).
1 1/2 cups meat stock.

First, step—Grind the peeled shrimp then the pork fat in the meat grinder, using the fine cutter. Add salt and pepper, 2-3 of the flour and the egg. Mix thoroughly with a spoon or with the tips of the fingers until it is very well mixed and forms a soft dough. Take two tablespoons at a time and roll back and forth in the remaining flour. Fry in deep fat until a golden brown. Repeat until the mixture is all used up.

Second step—Cut cauliflower into sections, slice the bamboo shoots real thin, cut the green onion into two lengthwise pieces an inch long each. Put three tablespoons of lard in the frying pan. Fry the mushrooms, the bamboo shoots, the cauliflower and the onion. Add the small shrimp croquettes to this mixture and sprinkle with a very small amount of flour. Stir constantly to prevent burning. When the vegetables are wilted add a cup and a half of any meat stock, or water may be used instead. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve with cooked rice, and if any is available a bit of Chinese sauce.

This is rather an unusual program for our column of a Saturday morning, but these recipes are given as is evident, I think, in answer to a very special request. And they can not fail to prove of interest to all of us, since fish is always a desirable food for our consumption and these dishes are most attractive.

As for our Sunday menu—why should I presume that our friends are unable to struggle through a Sunday without the Housekeeper's Menu? But I do wish I might know of some of the good things made ready in the kitchens of the friends who read this page. If only I had some of your menus, as you serve them, I could share your numerous dishes with the friends of the column. Why not send them in to me—that we may use them here for a change?

The program includes "Overture to Leonore, No. 3," Beethoven; "Symphony in G Major," Haydn; an instrumental, "A Night on Bald Mountain," Moussorgsky; symphonic variations, "Lullaby," Vincent d'Indy, and "Till Eulenspiegel," Schumann.

The final concert of the Goldman Band will be broadcast direct from the campus of the New York University through the red network, including the sides, WCAP, WJZ, Schenectady, WTAM, Cleveland, WOR, Buffalo, WCAE, Pittsburgh, and other stations. WMAL is broadcast here during the time formerly given over to the Goldman Band. The concert will feature Louis Madden, soprano, and Del D. Stalger, cornetist, as soloists.

It is expected that appropriate ceremonies to mark the close of this New York season will be held at this time. The name of Edwin Franko Goldman as a band leader and composer has been heralded from coast to coast during the past years and Mr. Goldman has been the recipient of many honors. At the closing concert on this evening when they terminate their New York City appearances for the season.

Mr. Goldman has arranged a special program which will open with the famous "Marche Solennelle," of Tchaikovsky, a selection which possesses the solemnity appropriate to the ceremonial. The balance of the program includes compositions of Schumann, Liszt, Wagner, Rossini and Beethoven.

The Week-Enders at 6:30 o'clock will broadcast from the Shenandoah Valley of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Ivy Scott, the soprano; Evan Davies, well-known Scotch impersonator, and a fifteen-piece orchestra under the direction of David Dutton will make the trip from New York.

This program is followed by a Bible talk by William R. Schumaker, associate religious work director of the Y. M. C. A., under the auspices of the Organized Bible Class Association.

After the Philharmonic concert, Cass Hagan and his Park Central Orchestra will present three-quarters of an hour of dance music, followed at 10 o'clock by the Palais d'Or Orchestra. Cass Hagan is one of the newcomers to Broadway and just recently went into the Park Central Hotel. In every program over the air Hagan presents some feature or concert work arranged in dance rhythm and especially prepared for his radio audience.

The new artists will be heard on the WMAL program tonight between 8:30 and 9 o'clock. Rubye L. Booth, pianist, and Joseph Anthony Atchison, lyric tenor, will present an hour of dance music at 9 o'clock.

WMAL's barn dance program, which lasts about three hours, will be on the air from the Nashville station at 9 o'clock. The Harniss Makers will be heard from KMA, Shenandoah, Iowa at 10 o'clock for a period of two hours. WBM, Chicago, will present a two-hour jazz program beginning at midnight. The barn dance and other features of WBL, Chicago, which last about six hours on Saturday nights, will be started at 7 o'clock.

Mrs. Annie C. Hill to Speak.

Mrs. Annie C. Hill, founder and leader of the Christian Science Parent Church, will speak tomorrow at 11 o'clock services at the Hotel Lafayette. Mrs. Hill for the last four months has been lecturing and teaching in London. She will speak regularly in Washington every Sunday for the next three months.

$1,000,000,000 RESERVE CREDIT USED IN JUNE

Holiday Demand for Currency Reflected Further in Early July Rise.

EXCHANGE PRICES STRONG

By F. W. PATTERSON.

The average volume of reserve bank credit in use during June, $1,000,000,000, was close to the highest level of the year, and there was a substantial temporary advance above this level early in July, reflecting the effect of the holiday demand for currency, which was met by the member banks through increasing their borrowings at the Federal Reserve Banks, according to a review of the month issued by the Federal Reserve Board yesterday.

This indebtedness was reduced as the currency returned from circulation, with the consequence that the volume of reserve bank credit in use decreased from week to week after July 5, and toward the end of the month was close to the lowest level of the year, and about $125,000,000 below the level of a year ago.

The recent decrease, the Federal Reserve Board points out, occurred in part in reserve bank holdings of acceptances, which usually decline during the summer, but was reflected primarily in a decrease in member bank borrowings. Both the temporary increase in borrowings at the end of June and the subsequent decrease, occurred at member banks throughout the country, but when the comparisons are made on a monthly basis, it appears that the most considerable change during recent months has been a reduction in the indebtedness of New York City banks to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, which was in June and July near the lowest level since 1924.

Member banks in other leading cities, on the other hand, owed the reserve banks slightly more than at the same time in 1926 or 1925. Member banks outside of the leading cities, however, have increased their borrowings somewhat during recent months, as is usual at this season, but throughout the last three months were borrowing less at the reserve banks than at the corresponding season in any other recent year.

Prices Strong on Exchange.

The week closed yesterday on the Washington Stock Exchange with a slight falling off in the volume of trading which in no way affected the price tone which remained strong, and in the case of some stocks moved upward.

Potomac Electric Power preferred came out at 10 1/2, and advanced another fraction to close at 10 3/4, a new high since the recent listing of this issue. Washington Railway & Electric preferred opened unchanged from the day before at 9 3/4 and maintained the level through to close with 30 shares changing hands in five lots. Capital Traction started at 10 1/4, eased to 10 1/2, with final sale recorded at 10 1/4.

Riggs National Bank continued strong and sold at 48 1/4, a gain of 1 1/4.
